The common, cloud-based document base of the RockINEurope Project has been completed

RockINEurope website is already under development, and its logo has been created. The name of the website will be Acrobatic Rock'n'Roll Center of Knowledge (ARCK).

One of the main points, goals of the project is the creation of a knowledge repository, which allow professional stakeholders working with acrobatic Rock'n'Roll to brows between the most recent and update educational and training materials connected to the sport. The collection of this common, cloud-based knowledge and document base will be available on the ARCK website. Those interested in studying these materials, educational and training-related documents will find an organized system of international knowledge where materials in English cover the most distinct aspects of teaching and practicing acrobatic Rock'n'Roll topics, such as assessment and point system, long-term training processes and the presentation of the system of acrobatic elements.

The teaching materials are in harmony with most of the state granted programmes that have been running throughout the world in several continents and which allow the next generation of dancers and trainers to have the most up-dated knowledge in this field.

All the materials on this website including online courses are for free and are targeted at both newcomers and professional athletes, coaches and judges in Acrobatic Rock'n'Roll.
